Scott Gast performs in a Rolling Stones tribute band "Start Me Up" in Honduras, in front of thousands of fans in September.

Tears in Heaven

Scott Gast's life was like a streaking comet across the sky, a gift to his family and this community.

He was our very own rock star.

He was also a son, a brother, a Christian, a friend.

And for more than a decade he was on the stage — right where he was meant to be — a meteoric performer recognized for his professionalism and for giving it his all for every gig.

His loss is so huge there truly are no words that can explain it. It's a space of no comfort. We join the community in expressing our deepest sympathies to his parents, George and Melanae Gast, and his brother, Bryan.
